Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

- SOC / Inland REOC remains activated in support of 2014 Drought

Weather

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Medford Weather:

High pressure aloft will provide dry, very warm conditions both today and Monday. A surface thermal trough along the coast today will move north and shift inland Monday. So, the warmest day along the coast will be today with cooling commencing Monday. There was a fair amount of high clouds that moved into the area yesterday. Those helped keep temperatures a bit lower than forecast.

Eureka Weather:

High pressure will maintain warm and sunny weather conditions through Monday. A series of fronts will bring cooling and a chance of showers later next week.

Reno Weather:

High pressure builds over the region with winds remaining light. Temperatures will be above seasonal averages through early next week. Low chances of precipitation return to the Sierra mid to late week.

San Francisco Weather:

High pressure over the region will result in continued dry weather conditions and warm to very warm temperatures through Monday. Cooling is then expected by midweek with increased chances for widespread precipitation late in the week.

Sacramento Weather:

High pressure will remain in control through early next week with dry weather and warm temperatures to include near record temperatures Sunday and Monday, a little cooler for mid-week. Chances of widespread precipitation late in the week.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Hanford Weather:

High pressure will continue to build over the area and persist for the next several days creating a warming trend and mostly clear skies. Low pressure will approach the region late in the week bringing another chance of precipitation.

Weather

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Gusty northeast winds will bring warm and dry conditions to the area through Monday with temperatures peaking on Sunday. A low pressure system will approach the West Coast mid-week resulting in a cooling trend Tuesday through the end of the week.

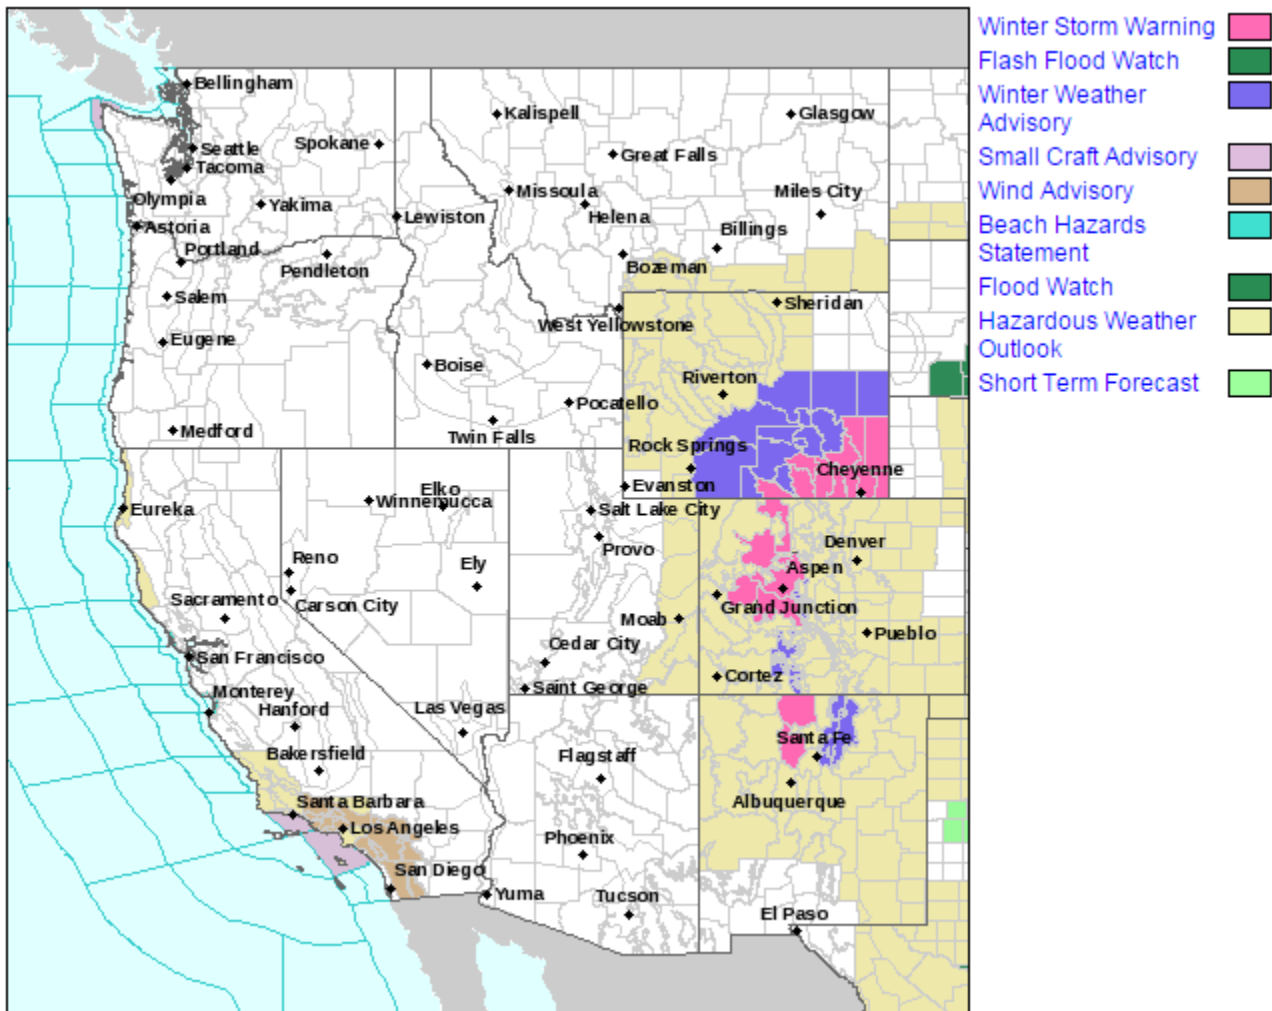

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

Gusty northeast winds near the coastal foothills and inland valleys will decrease this afternoon with weaker winds for Monday and Tuesday. High pressure aloft near the west coast will bring coastal warming into Monday with warming for the mountains and deserts continuing through mid-week. A pacific low pressure system will move inland through California late in the week bringing cooling and gusty west winds in the mountains and deserts with small chances for light precipitation late Friday night into early Saturday. Night and morning coastal low clouds and fog may return as early as late Tuesday night and early Wednesday becoming for extensive and spreading farther inland on the following nights.

Southeast California Weather:

An unseasonably large and cool weather system will remain nearly stationary over Colorado and New Mexico today. This system will be large enough to keep temperatures near or slightly below normal over the area. A high pressure system will build into the region this week for clear skies and significantly warmer temperatures through the middle to latter portion of the week.
